

What did you find that
was interesting?

There were three readings to familiarize yourselves with for today, what do you find that is interesting within or across them?

One thing that you absolutely must note is the motivation of each article:

“The human mind is born free, yet everywhere it is in chains”

–Ted Nelson

“In most contemporary educational situations...
the computer [is] programming the child”

–Seymour Papert

“For most of recorded history, the interactions of humans with their media have been nonconversational and passive...”

–Alan Kay and Adele Goldberg

So, with the motivation as background,
what do you find as interesting within and across today's readings?